Dear Friends,

At the Arts and Education Council (A&E), we believe the arts are critical to a thriving St. Louis region. They spark innovation, energize our communities, inspire our kids, build bridges among cultures and enrich our lives.

2017 was a year of exciting developments focused on innovation and inspiration at A&E. We started the year by launching the stARTup Competition for arts entrepreneurs. One of only two like it in the country, the stARTup Competition is a partnership between A&E and the PNC Foundation to foster innovative ideas that have the potential to change the cultural fabric of our region.

In that spirit of sparking innovation, we opened the Catalyst Innovation Lab within our arts incubator, the Centene Center for the Arts. This “living room for the arts” is a space to share new ideas that will push us forward together.

We also expanded our grant programs to reach nearly 100 organizations and 1.6 million people and welcomed new programs to A&E’s lineup like the Katherine Dunham Fellowship, which aims to create a more diverse pipeline of arts leadership through a paid fellowship opportunity for African-American men and women.

2017 was also a year in which we experienced record-breaking support from you, our donors, including Edward Jones and its associates committing more than $1 million to A&E through their workplace giving initiative — the largest in A&E’s 54-year history.

In short, it was a remarkable year of programs and services that helped shape a more vibrant community for all — thanks to the collective support of you and your fellow donors.

Thank you for believing in the power of the arts and for your support for A&E. When the arts thrive, our city thrives!

Sincerely,

Cynthia A. Prost
President and CEO

The Katherine Dunham Fellowship is a 16-week paid learning opportunity designed to develop a pipeline of African-American leaders in the arts. Named after the dancer, choreographer and activist, the program was created and initially funded by Sara and Jack Burke.

After seven transformative and successful years at the Regional Arts Commission, the Katherine Dunham Fellowship relocated to the Arts and Education Council in fall 2017 and Webster University senior Quinton Ward was selected as the first-ever male fellow in the program.
The Maritz Arts and Education Fund for Teachers, now in its eighth year, provides critical funds to classroom-based art projects in St. Louis area school districts, helping students and teachers thrive with the arts. In 2017, the Fund provided support to 11 schools across the region for classroom art projects during the 2016-17 academic year.

Students at La Salle Middle School learned West African dance and choreography through a grant from the Arts and Education Council’s Maritz Fund.

The Art Education Fund, established with a lead contribution by Wells Fargo Advisors, provides tuition scholarships and transportation subsidies intended to remove financial barriers that may prevent talented high school art students in under-served or low-income areas from expanding their creative training outside the traditional classroom setting.

In 2017, the Fund made it possible for four exceptionally talented students to pursue artistic training at Open Studio Network, Pianos for People and COCA.

Kameryn Davis (left) and SenSa Maasera received support in 2017 from A&E’s Art Education Fund to study dance at COCA (an A&E grantee).

The stARTup Competition

a partnership between the Arts and Education Council (A&E) and the PNC Foundation, launched in 2017 to foster innovative ideas that will change the fabric of the St. Louis arts community and improve the region.

From 31 applicants, a panel of entrepreneurs and community leaders selected two winners: Creative Reaction Lab, a social equity nonprofit that trains Black and Latinx youth to design better communities, and FLOW, a writing community and literary arts center for writers of all backgrounds. Winners received $10,000 in prize money, a year of incubation support in A&E’s Centene Center for the Arts and mentoring and professional development opportunities.

PNC Project Grants underwritten by the PNC Foundation help smaller organizations make a big impact by providing merit-based grants for arts and arts education projects addressing community needs in the St. Louis bi-state region. In 2017, 31 organizations received support for programs that served more than 200,000 people.

The Catalyst Innovation Lab opened in November 2017 on the ground floor of the Arts and Education Council’s Centene Center for the Arts. As a “living room for the arts”, the 1,900-square foot Lab is used by arts and community leaders for programs that propel the arts and the St. Louis region forward. The Catalyst Innovation Lab was made possible with lead support of $250,000 from Centene Charitable Foundation and design support from HOK.

Michael F. Neidorff, chairman, president and CEO of Centene, and Mayor Lyda Krewson cut the ribbon at the grand opening of the Catalyst Innovation Lab in November 2017.
Workplace Giving Campaigns in 2017 hosted by corporate and community partners of the Arts and Education Council (A&E) harnessed the power of numbers to raise funds for A&E, creating positive change and engaging employees throughout the region.

The Arts and Education Council’s (A&E) allocations and grants support encompasses myriad opportunities that support the arts and arts education in the St. Louis region. In 2017, 94 organizations were supported through funding programs including Operating Support, PNC Project Grants, the Maritz Arts and Education Fund for Teachers, the Monsanto Fund Rural Community Arts Education Program, the Monsanto Creative Impact Fund and incubation support in the Centene Center for the Arts.
THANK YOU!

Your gift to the Arts and Education Council has grown into millions of art experiences, shaping a more vibrant community for all.

When the arts thrive, our city thrives!
